Statement

IAS

The one week refresher courses and 4 week training programmes organised for IAS officers is in pursuance of the Government decision to restructure civil service training to develop competence and a work culture suited to the service of the people. An evaluation of the one week refresher courses was commissioned on two training experts independently. In their reports submitted in February 1987, they recommended the continuance of the courses with certain modifications in the objective and training methodology which have since been carried out.

A Committee under the Chairmanship of a Member, Planning Commission was constituted in July, 1988 to evaluate the 4 weeks programmes. The Committee in its report has appreciated the knowledge and skills brought by these programmes to bear on the diverse challenges of development work that IAS officers are charged with.

IPS

The new Training Programmes have enabled IPS officers to improve their performance and efficiency in the field which is a direct benefit to the Administration. As such no formal evaluation of the benefits which have accrued to the administration as a result of this training programme has been made.

No proposal is pending to undertake such an evaluation for the present.
